

As a satellite radio subscriber, I am appalled by the pending legislation to restrict the type of programming on XM/Sirius satellite radio stations. I pay for this service/content and I have a real problem with the NAB telling me I have no right to this information because it infringes on their business. Most of America pays for cable/satellite dish service to their homes because the programming is higher quality than most local stations. If CineMax, HBO and Stars can show movies 24/7, then I guess the industry giants like Fox, ABC, and NBC should also be filing petitions. It seems to me that the NAB doesn't want to share it's "piece of the pie" because it would cut into their gigantic yearly profits. Monopoly companies like ClearChannel Comm. would love nothing more than to be the "king of the hill". They swallowed up most of the radio stations across America and the quality of programming, quite frankly, stinks. This whole petition sounds like nothing more than a "sour grapes" complaint. Instead of trying to infringe on my 1st Amendment rights, maybe they should focus their energies into creating quality programming on their stations. When last I checked, competition wasn't against the law
